Touching & interesting...

By A Customer

I loved the letter-diary format! I was sorry to see Abby, Jessi, & Mallory drop out of the club. I loved the parts of how Mary Anne is getting on with her life after the fire. I was so touched when she decided to give up going to camp with Abby & Kristy to make sure her parents were all right. It was so good seeing Mary Anne's grandmother again! I hope Verna appears in more future books. I just love her. I love how understanding she was of Mary Anne's sadness over the house fire. Boy, was I annoyed with Logan when he started butting into Mary Anne's business & acting as if she needed special protection! I was glad that Kristy urged her to stand up to Logan. When Mary Anne & her family went back one last time to try to collect what they could from the remains of the farm house, Logan had NO right to invite himself into to what was strictly family business! Mary Anne is one strong, courageous girl who doesn't sugarcoat reality & that's one reason she's my favorite character. I loved the scene where Jessi, Mallory, & Shannon give Mary Anne a photo album & Mary Anne is so touched that she cries. Another moving scene is when Verna gives Mary Anne's family boxes of things that that had belonged to Mary Anne's natural mother & whatever bad feelings Richard & Verna had just melt & they're re-united! I know that made Mary Anne relieved! I like the letters between Stacey & Claudia; those were the funny parts. Claudia's family was intending to "get in touch with nature" by vacationing on a remote island...no TV, computers, or dishwasher. But the results are hilarious! Meanwhile, Stacey & her dad are each dating someone & each of them feel funny about the other's spending so much time with that person. I thought it was realistic that Samantha's thinking of moving in with Stacey's dad. All in all, touching, some sad parts, funny, & uplifting.

EVERYTHING changes!

By Theatre Kidd

Baby-sitters Friends Forever is a great series! New things are happening with every single one of the babysitters (the author brought the members of the club down to the original four people), and problems that they experience are getting to be more teenage, not just problems with baby-sitting charges. Here's what's happening with their fantastic four:

Kristy: is worrying big time about what is going to happen with the Baby-sitters Club as they get older and afraid that she and all her friends will drift apart in high school.

Mary Anne: is getting over the fire a little, and thinking about being her own person, not just the person her dad or Logan want her to be. She starts to think that Logan is smothering her.

Claudia: is on a trip to a "deserted" island with her family, and gets back to the simple life and finds that she likes it a lot.

Stacey: is having difficulties with her father- he doesn't like Ethan and thinks that Stacey is seeing too much of him, and he is thinking about moving in with his girlfriend who he has been seeing for a long time. Stacey doesn't like the idea of that.

This is a great book, and seems to focus on the situations that teenagers face when they start to head out of middle school and start to head into high school. A wonderful, realistic book.

Refreshing change for BSC

By A Customer

I've been reading the BSc series for years, and I think that this is a great way to change the series and (hopefully) update it a little. Over time, the books seemed to become too focused on baby-sitting, and the club members didn't seem to do that much outside of that. Now we'll be able to see how they deal with kids their own age and older a little more. And not like in CD, where EVERYTHING turns into a crisis! The only thing I'm really sad about is losing all the other members of the club, especially Abby and Jessi. We've been reading about them for years, and now to have them just abruptly leave the club is a little to unfair to readers who care about these characters. I hope that we might get a new series about Jessi's ballet school, or that Abby might rejoin in a limited basis later. I also felt like we should have had Jessi and Abby write in this book too, so we could have a better idea of their POV on these big changes in their lives. Can't wait to see what's coming up for everyone in the club. Keep up the good work, Ann Martin!
