Combat is much easier now

By Scott Billingsley

Before purchasing this product, I used notecards for initiative determination in the campaign that I run. Each PC and NPC had a card, and when we rolled initiative I would write down the various results and then put the notecards in order, then cycle through. It worked, but it was a little clumsy.

I saw this product and thought it might solve my problems. The magnets work well, and names can easily be erased. All characters involved are visible at all times, so changes in initiative are easy to make. The board makes it easy to keep track of rounds, whose turn it is. The dry erase board side for notes is perfect for keeping track of NPC hit points and any modifications to their stats that may come up during combat (from buffs from allies, getting hit by a ray of enfeeblement, etc.). This board takes the place of both the notecards I used to use and the notebook for notes that I used previously.

I have not had any problems with the magnets sticking. My only complaint is the turn arrow and the round counter arrow don't seem to have a very solid stick. They have not fallen off during any of the past three sessions I've used it in, but I believe these will be the first magnets to fail as time passes. Fortunately, there are a couple of each included with the board.

Overall, it is a great product and I am very happy with it. I would recommend this item to anyone that is running a pen and paper roleplaying game.

Awesome tool!

By salvina

Works with both dry and wet erase markers. There are more tabs than I could ever use in one combat, so I can plan multiple combats in advance. Easily store all the parts because it's magnetic on both sides. Awesome tool!

Better if you have an easel or something

By Anonymous

This is great for the DM. i gotta say it makes keeping tracks of baddies and PC's easy. the dry erase feature makes it super easy to add "poisoned for 3 rounds" for one person or "stunned for next round" to someone else, and then just wipe it away.

as for displaying it for the party, the magnetics when vertical would slip, or fall off. an easel would be a good accompaniment, but might take up space on the table that could be used for better purposes (potato chips)

i use mine every time, but it isn't a "mandatory" item
